

“The San Francisco Industrial School and the Origins of Juvenile Justice in California:
A Glance at the Great Reformation”

The Center on Juvenile and Criminal Justice (CJCJ) is pleased to offer “The San Francisco Industrial School and the Origins of Juvenile Justice in California: A Glance at the Great Reformation” by Daniel Macallair, MPA, Executive Director.

Professors frequently utilize this publication for their criminal and juvenile justice courses as Daniel Macallair, MPA, articulately examines the Industrial School’s controversial thirty-three year history. Mr. Macallair looks at the development of California juvenile laws, policies, and practices. The San Francisco Industrial School was the inaugural and most significant nineteenth century event in the establishment of California’s juvenile justice system and everyone interested in studying criminal justice should have a copy of this well priced publication.

This article is one of CJCJ’s most requested publications and is moderately priced at $10 per bound copy.

To purchase your copies of this publication, please contact CJCJ via email at cjcj@cjcj.org. Please remember to specify the number of copies desired and a mailing address. An invoice will be sent with the publication(s) to the provided mailing address. Upon receipt of the publication(s), please promptly follow up with a check made out to CJCJ as the form of payment.
